

UTOPIA

My name is Moisés Campos and I am the architect of an idea

The mentor and main responsible for the Utopia project participated yesterday, October 9th, in the 7th edition of Greenfest dedicated to "Education for Sustainability" that takes place at the Estoril Congress Center until next Sunday (10/12).

It was with speakers such as Tiago Mota Saraiva (Ateliernob), Pedro Prista (author of the recently published book "Terra, Palha, Cal" from Argumentum Edições) and Henrique Schreck (who develops earthen architecture projects - Taipa - since 1990) that the CEO of the 'technological company that aims to be based in an area with minimal impact on the environment, in Póvoa de Lanhoso', integrated the Conference: Sustainable and Social Architecture "Several means, the same end".

In a panel composed of mostly professional architects, Moisés Campos did not feel at all out of place, presenting himself as 'architect of an idea' and, judging by the smiles of those present in the 'Creative Crowd' space during the presentation, and by the applause at the end, the goal of taking Plako's dream to more people, inspiring them with this idea - of building with used tires and other plans drawn up towards the utopia of 'zero impact' - was, once again, successful.
